LETTER FROM ELKTON.

Correspondent of the Alexandria Gazette.]
Elkton, Va., Sept. 9.—The proper order for arranging a vacation has been followed by your correspondent in passing from Atlantic City by the broad ocean to this comfortable and beautifully situated hotel in the far famed Valley of Virginia, with the noble ramparts of Massanutton to the west and the mystic line of the Blue Ridge rising along the east, and shutting us in from the old tide water section of the State. Before taking up our abode here we apent a few tide water section of the State. Before taking up our abode here we spent a few days in the vicinity of White Post at "Benvenue" the hospitable home of Captain David Meade, situated in one of the fairest and most fertile parts of the Valley. While there we had the pleasure of some delightful drives with the captain through that beautiful and interesting country. We saw once more esting country. We saw once more "Mountain View," a sacred place to all those who owe allegiance to the Episcopal Church, as the home of its great bishop, the Right Rev. William Meade, who was the restorer of the fortunes of that church after the revolution in the diocese of Virginia, the defender of its parity, and the founder of the Theological Seminary in Virginia. With words very similar to those the record of his noble life is summed up on his tomb in the quiet cemetery looking towards the east on the brow of Seminary Hill. As we drove along, the Sunday morning of our stay, on our way to church, the captain showed us the corner of "Mountain View" where once stood a gate through which the bishop so often en-tered upon the public road on his way to the same sacred place, Christ Church, Millwood, whither we were now going, of which the bishop was so long the venerated rector and and pastor. We also passed "Rosney" the birthplace of the late Dr. Kinloch Nelson, formerly an honored professor Nelson, formerly an honored professor of the Theological Seminary, we have just mentioned, near your city. Time does not permit us to tell of the numerous beautiful and well-kept estates around Millwood. We must, however, mention' Saratoga," the historic home of General Morgan, said to have been built by Hessian soldiers under the general's direction. Passing from Saratoga on one of our trips we took a on one of our trips we took a most charming park-like drive, forming many. For catalogue address SISTERS OF THE HOLY CROSS.

But at the home of the poet-soldier we could not linger, so we sped on behind could not linger, so we sped on behind our trusty steed to the "Post" and "Benvenue." Another old home, "Lucky Hit," adjoining "Benvenue," must be noted in our letter. This was built by Col. Richard Kidder Meade, one of Washington's aides and an intimate and trusted friend of the great leader. Like "Saratoga" its massive unadorned walls of stone reflect the solid character and simple life of its honored character and simple life of its honored builder. Almost everyone knows that the village of White Post received named from the White Post which pointed the way to "Green-way Court" the seat of that ro-manic figure and extensive landed proprietor, Thomas Lord Fairfax whose remains now rest beneath the Episcopal Church which he endowed in Winchester. The "White Post" is carefully hour's distance from Luray, on the the affected parts is better than a plaster for a lame back and for pains in the north, and Basic City, on the south, and is the present terminus of the Chesapeaks and Western Railroad, connecting it with Harrisonburg and points beyond. There is a fully equipped modern tannery, a stave factory and some other manufacturing establish-ments here. We noticed the statement in the Gazette the other day, that about half the supply of manganese now used came from Virginia. So with that add-ed interest in company with two friends we took a walk to the manganese mines and washeries situated on Hance's SUMMER STATIONERY in all the new hades and shapes.
